Uncover the Hidden History of the Orphan Trains
Between 1854 and 1929, over 250,000 children were sent from New York and Boston to the west on what became known as the Orphan Trains. Many were true orphans—others were not—but all were headed for a new life.

Join us for a compelling presentation as Sherry Burton sheds light on this little-known chapter of American history. Her historical fiction series, inspired by real events, honors the voices of the children who lived it—each book telling one child's journey to the unknown.

Come learn the stories history left behind.
